

Dark Matter and Energy could just be within our solar system. As we turn these concepts into computational matter, there will likely be other ways and forms of matter discoverable as we expand views through telescopes.